Late in the year the insistent rhythms of the Twist became an international fad giving rise to a rash of new songs, movies, and not a few strains and dislocations.

Foreword

Books are closed; the last bell rings

And carefree days are lost.

Nostalgia strikes; your memory wanes.

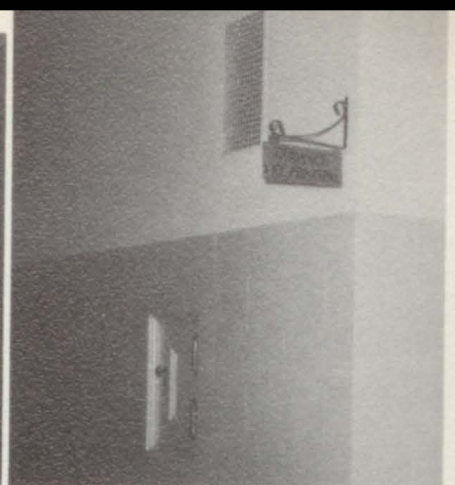

There are the faces, but not the names -

Pick up your yearbook and leaf it through

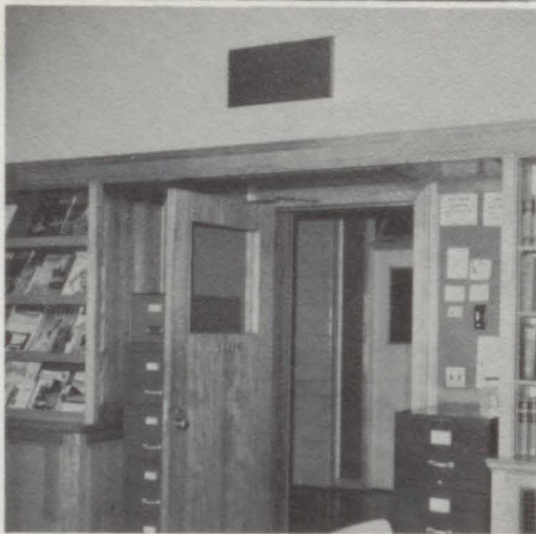

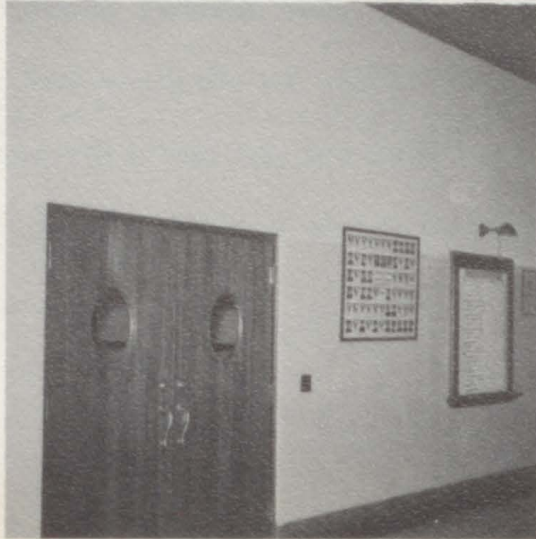

And remember the days so dear to you.

DEDICATION

TO TIME

Is time a commodity? Just try to buy it, if it has "run out!"

Can you waste it, disregard it, misuse it, while it away, grasp it and make the most of it? Some even "do time," if they have not used it properly in their lives.

Time is the "stuff" of which our lives are made or lost. It furnishes the doorway to success and the windows to a brilliant view of life. It beckons us up the stream of life to success.

We have chosen TIME as our thought for the 1962 yearbook; and may you consider it carefully with all its implications in your own life as you enjoy the pictures of the front and side entrances to our Alma Mater. Dream, if you will, on the future, --your own future--as you look through the windows of the school to the world beyond and especially upon the river that winds into the unknown which may spell success or failure, depending upon your own personal use of TIME.

We Honor

Mrs. Carl Roehling

To write something that is modest enough to please Mrs. Roehling and yet sufficient to satisfy the rest of us will not be easy.

If you are seeking a person who is ever willing to accommodate with her talent and to deliver with meticulous skill--her very best, Mrs. Roehling is the personification of these virtues. She is very quiet but has an intensity of feeling for the matter at hand.

In her youth she had the rare privilege of studying piano for ten years under Miss Zada Lee, an excellent teacher. Then followed instruction by Mr. Howard Blockway, who later became a teacher in the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

In the Carnegie Hall building are many studios where students go for music lessons. Here, voice teachers must have accompanists for their students; and here it was that Mrs. Roehling gained valuable experience. To quote her words: "It doesn't matter how much talent anyone has, if he isn't willing to work and practice."

After accompanying many different soloists in concert work, her really big chance came. It was the opportunity of "trying out" among many other accompanists for the coveted honor of being Madame Homer's accompanist. If she could achieve this distinction, it would mean that she had been chosen to follow in the footsteps of the skilled musician who was retiring after having accompanied not only Madame Homer, who had sung in the premiere performance of the opera MADAME BUTTERFLY and had appeared with the great Enrico Caruso, but other "greats," including Madame Schumann-Heink, the distinguished German-American operatic contralto and Alma Gluck, the superb American soprano.

Mrs. Roehling felt that her whole future "hung in the balance"; she says that she didn't even write home about it, because she felt that it would be unwise to raise her family's hopes. But, as we know, success crowned her efforts.

It was in Jamestown, New York,--in 1923--that they first appeared on the concert stage together. Before the performance, although Madame Homer had every confidence in her accompanist, it was not thus with the accompanist herself. She vividly recalls that she was "green with fright" and felt positively ill.

Later when Madame Homer sang a command performance in the East Room of the White House in Washington for President Coolidge, Mrs. Roehling accompanied her.

She was with this noted American contralto for four seasons--until Mr. Roehling, another fine musician, came into her life; and they were married.

After that, Mrs. Roehling had her own studio in New York where she coached various singers, often accompanying them in their concerts. Her summers were spent in Oxford, her home town.

Now in "so-called" retirement here, she finds endless service she can and does freely give to Oxford soloists and the adult chorus.

When the music students of the Academy take part in contests, they are very happy to realize they can call upon Mrs. Roehling to accompany them, because they feel absolute security with her at the piano. With them she has journeyed to Syracuse, Ithaca, Binghamton, Norwich and Sidney.

In her church she is active as "choir mother" of the youth choir. Nor can we omit saying that she does "gray lady" work among shut-ins.

Our hearts are full of gratitude for what her presence here in Oxford means through "works and inspiration." This year we are happy to show our respect and esteem to "our own Mrs. Roehling" by honoring her in our year-book, exactly fifty years after her graduation from Oxford Academy.

Mrs. Dunker

Mrs. Sextilla P. Dunker

Your twelve years of devoted service in Oxford Academy are greatly appreciated by students, faculty, and administration.

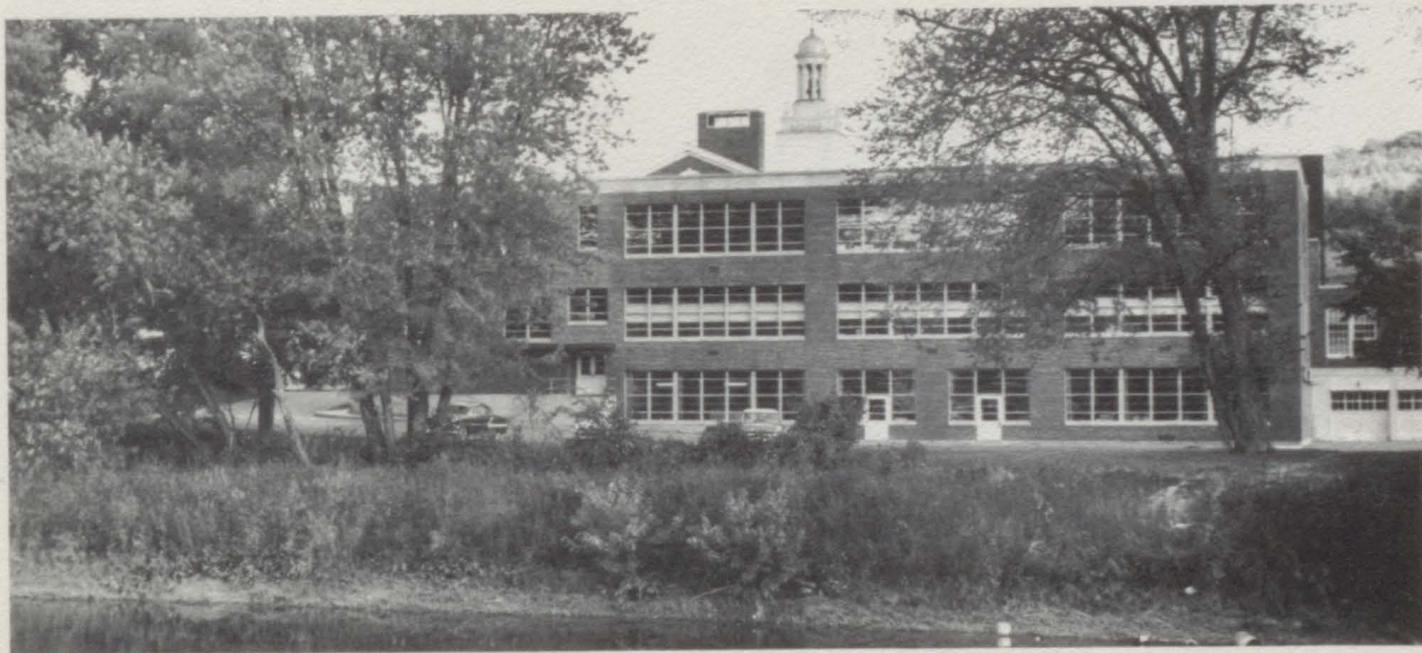

We sincerely hope that your years of retirement will be pleasant and that you will look back upon your teaching days with fond memories.

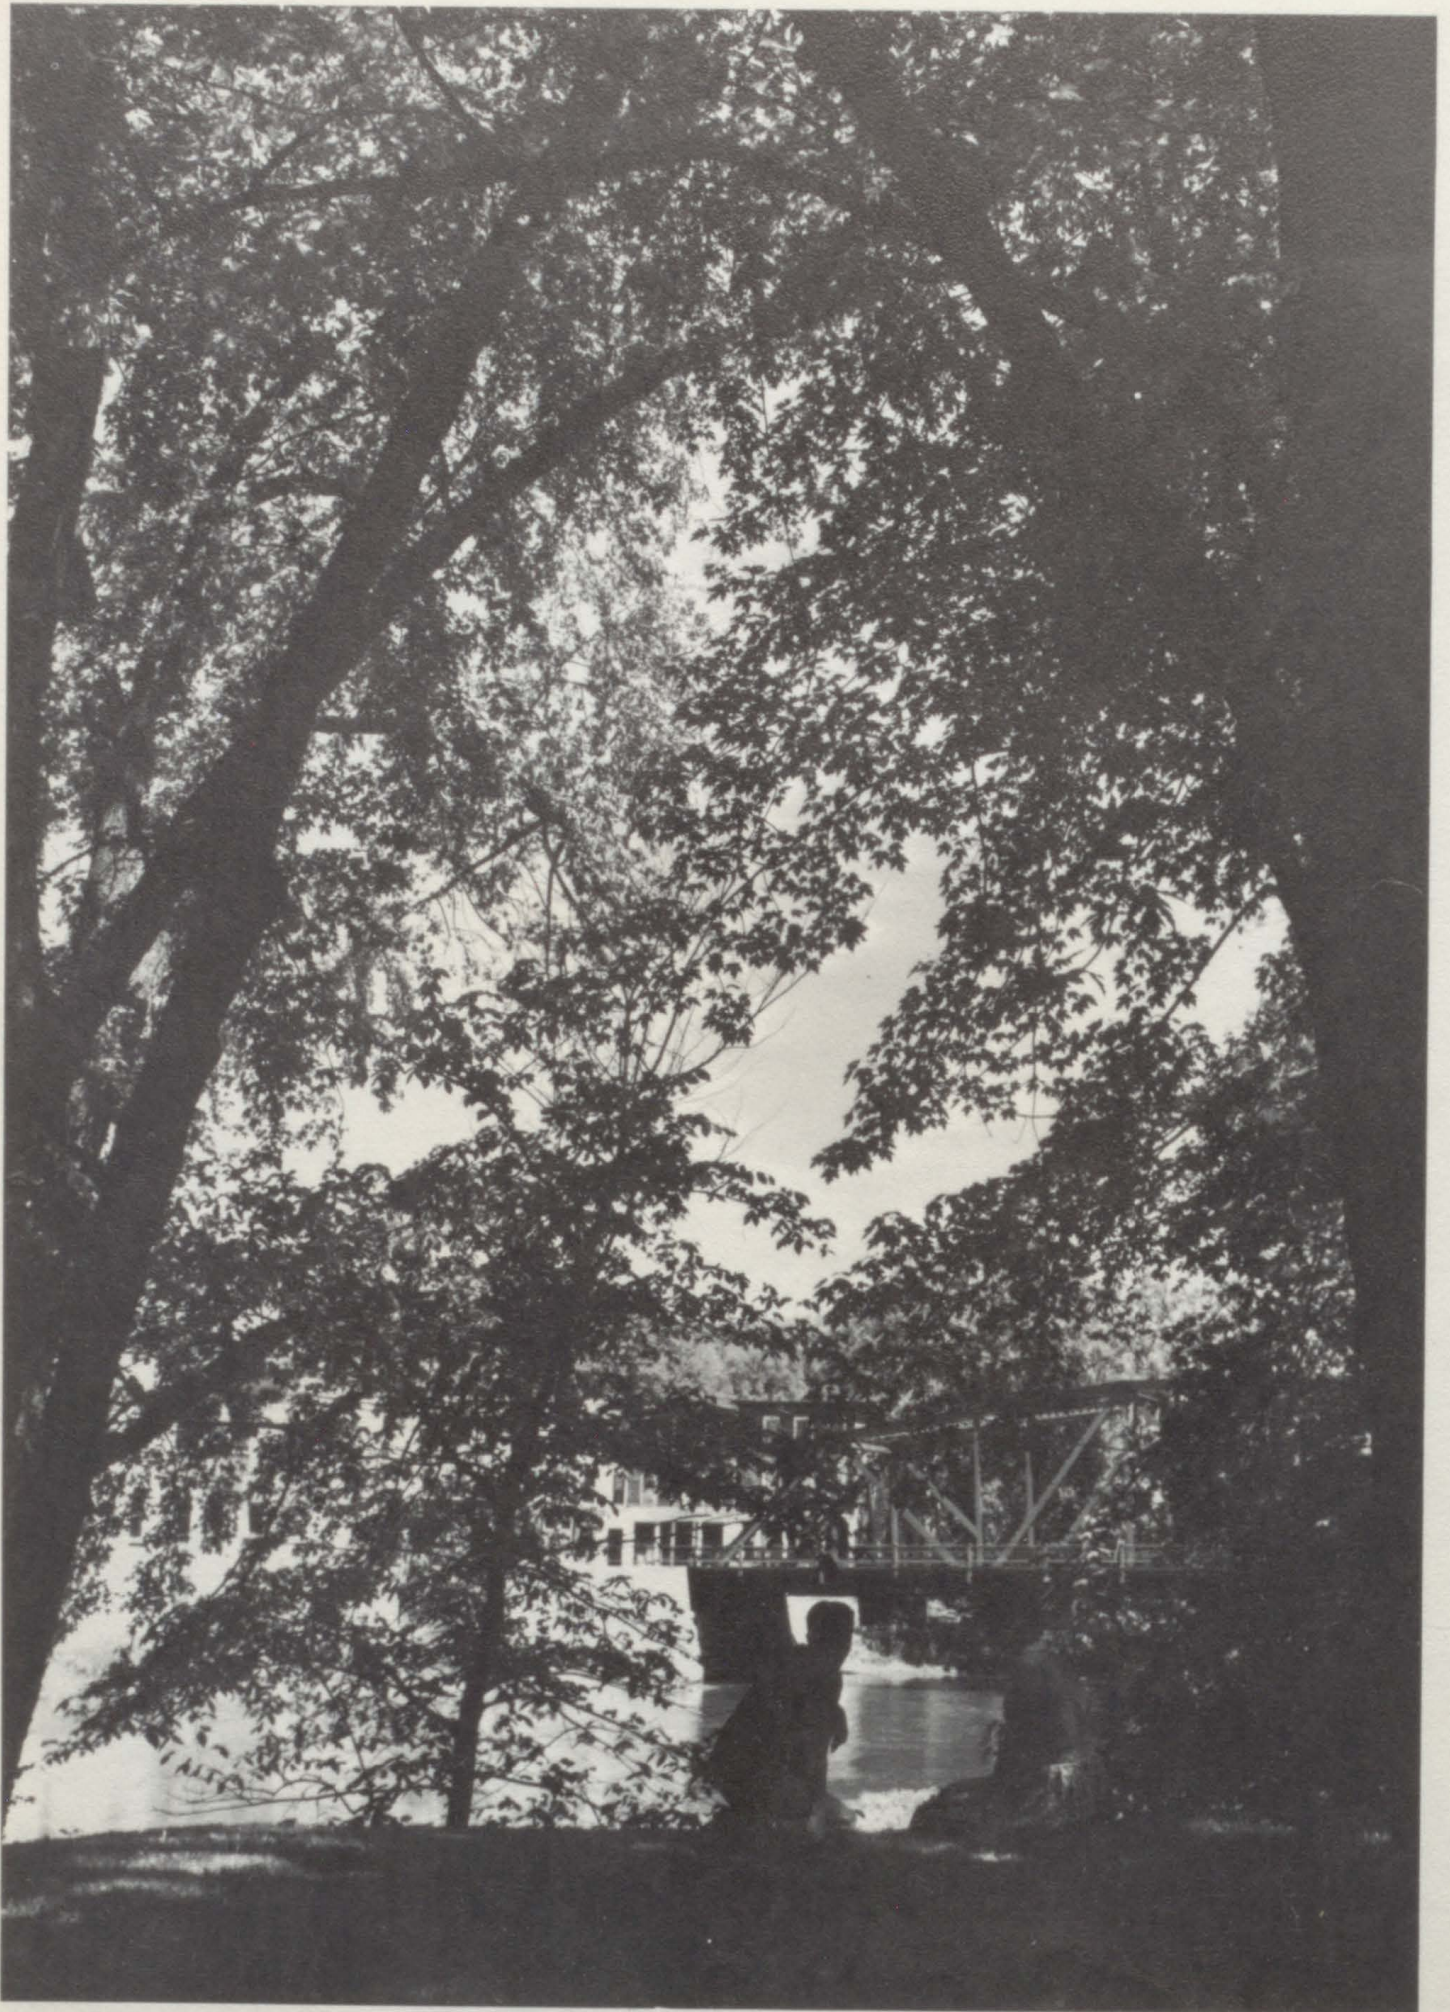

Mrs. Sturges

Mrs. Vera Sturges

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the many students that you successfully guided along the paths of education. The fruits of your work, we are sure, will long be remembered. May your retirement be one of pleasure and happiness.

Class History

We began our Freshman year in September 1958, with Miss Bull and Mr. Ratzlaff as advisors. We elected Bob Rice as president of the class, "Doc" Mayhew as vice-president, Mary Weidman as secretary, and Peggy Jones as our treasurer. The one financial program of the year was our class dance. Those in attendance, as well as our class treasury, benefited greatly from this "extravaganza."

When we started our Sophomore year of 1959, Miss Bull and Mr. Walsh became our class advisors for the remainder of our high school years. Jim Hill, president; Doug DeLong, vice-president; Jan Sumida, secretary; and Gloria Franklin, treasurer, were elected. Again our class dance was a successful undertaking. The "can-can" boys completed our western theme and performed very well.

We entered our Junior year of 1960, already anxious to order class rings. Jim Hill, president; Dick Diamond, vice-president; Linda Shepler, secretary; and Dot Bradt, treasurer, were our officers. We ordered our rings early in the fall and received them before Christmas vacation. Selling magazines was our big financial campaign that year. Once again, the class dance netted a profit for us. Our "hula" boys returned this year and danced for us in the Hawaiian theme. The Junior Prom soon arrived and committees were busy preparing the gym for the best prom ever at Oxford. After much deliberation, lavender and royal purple were chosen for the decoration theme of "Twilight Time." The plans and work of everyone turned the Prom into a success.

Finally we entered our Senior year--and Room 308! Some seventy Seniors, the largest prospective graduating class in the Academy's history, approached their final year with wonder and great expectations. We elected "Doc" Mayhew, president; Jim Smith, vice-president; Jan Sumida, secretary; and Bob Rice, treasurer. We chose our Senior play, ROCKET IN HIS POCKET, and presented it on November 21. It was a big success, production-wise and financially. Our senior portraits arrived--for some of us after a delay--and there was the usual exchange. We had our class dance in February, and, again, had fun preparing for it.

All of us are anxiously awaiting graduation, but we approach it remembering our years at OACS, and looking forward to the future--work, further education (some forty percent have expressed this desire), the armed forces--and, of course, marriage!

back up, Dad...

I'm going to throw it!

Everyone of us looks forward to the day our children grow up and becomes stars of the future. Whether it be on a football field, in business or a dream of a Miss America title for a beautiful daughter, the future of our children is a vital concern to each of us.

While your child is still a baby is an excellent time to assure his or her financial security through life insurance. Now is the time to talk with your local Farm Family insurance agent and discuss the many plans available to prepare your children for their life ahead.
